

Name: _____

Class: _____

“Thank You, M’am” by Langston Hughes

Contrasts and Contradictions

Directions: Look over the short story “Thank You, M’am” again, thinking about what the characters are saying and doing. Now, in each of the boxes below, record on the left side what the character says or does (include the page number) and on the right side explain how this is different from what you were expecting.

What the character says or does. “You gonna take me to jail?” “Not with that face I would not take you nowhere.” P 150	How this is different from what I was expecting. Mrs. Jones caught Roger trying to steal her purse. Because she caught him, I was expecting her to take him to jail, or at least call the police, but she said she was not going to.
--	--

What the character says or does.	How this is different from what I was expecting.
---	---

What the character says or does.	How this is different from what I was expecting.
---	---

What the character says or does.	How this is different from what I was expecting.
---	---

--	--

What the character says or does.	How this is different from what I was expecting.
----------------------------------	--

What the character says or does.	How this is different from what I was expecting.
----------------------------------	--